

Transport Canada re: eFoil use in Canada

Thank you for contacting Transport Canada's Office of Boating Safety regarding e-foil use in Canada. Current legislation does prohibit the use of e-foils or any propeller driven surfboard type vessels in Canada. I can confirm that currently there is a working group in place that is reviewing this legislation with plans for it possibly be changed to allow e-foil use in Canada. Unfortunately, at this time there is no set date in which this will occur as it is still being reviewed.

The sale of e-foils is permitted in Canada, the regulation pertains to the actual operation of the vessels themselves; however, anyone purchasing these e-foils should be made fully aware of the current regulations that are in place and that they are currently illegal for use in Canada and there is no specific date planned on when this regulation will change.
